CHARLESTON.

FRIDAY MOBNING, FEBRUARY 15, 1867.

THE SPRING TRADE.

We have reached the middle of February, and the pleasant days of Spring are upon us; the time of all the year the most pleasant in our climate; when the occasional and fitful rigors of Winter are past, and ere yet the oppressive heat of the Sun's vertical rays gives our atmosphere a tropical character. The trees are in bloom, the gardens full of fragrance, and resplendent in their wealth of floral beauty. Our parks and public promenades once more are clad with virgin green. The birds are warbling their lenten carrols; in short, nature is gay, and all her creatures glad, rejoicing in their youth and beauty.

This is the season when many of our friends from the interior usually visit our city. The Races, in the bright and golden days of yore, attracted many strangers to the city. There was a fine flourishing Theatre also, now no more, that exercised no small influence in bringing strangers to Charleston. We are now deprived of these extraneous attractions, but the pleasant climate still is ours, so the soft zephyrs of spring, and the exhilarating breezes wafted in from the bosom of the broad Atlantic. Our hotels are excellently fitted up, and offer to the traveller all the means and appliances wherewith to take his comfort and enjoy his ease.

But Charleston is a great commercial centrethe natural outlet of a large extent of back country. The merchants of this and adjoining States for years have come to Charleston to make their purchases, and the leading houses of our city were in business relations with every part of the South and West. The several years of the war, and, still more, the general disruption of the framework of commerce, as of society, consequent upon the disastrous close of our war, have done much to derango this current of trade. But our merchants have been up and doing. They set to work promptly; fine stores were fitted up; large and well assorted stocks of goods of every description were brought here, and offered at reasonable rates. The railroads have all been repaired, and are, many of them at least, in better order now than they were before the war. The rates of freight are reasonable, and every effort is made, we have reason to believe, by the President and Superintendents of the several lines of roads radiating here, to facilitate the business in every possible way, and we have of late heard but few complaints on this score. There is now regular communication by rail with every part of the country; and by steamboat with Savannah, Florida, the eastern and northeastern parts of this State, as well as with all the leading ports of the North. The ave-with all the leading ports of the North. The avenues are all open, and there is every inducement for buyers to come here.

We have importers and jobbers here in every line of trade. Groceries, Dry Goods, Hats, Clothing, Fancy Goods, Hardware, Straw Goods and Milliners, Saddlery, Drugs, Paints, Boots and Shoes, Books, Crockery,—in short, every thing that LEE, by the Rev. Mr. IRVIN, at his front gate, ly in a hurry to be spliced. But any way, good Shoes, Books, Crockery, -in short, every thing that human flesh would wish to be heir to, can be had The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser states that here in abundance, and at prices as low as those here in abundance, and at prices as low as those obtaining in New York, the price of freight and and 4 year old. It is manifestly therefore to the interest of the country merchant to purchase here, where he is known; where he can come and select his goods every month, or every two months, rather than go on to New York once or twice a year. The old credit system, always a great curse to the country, is abolished. Transactions of all kinds, both North and South, as a rule, are for cash. This is found the best, the safest, and altogether the most satisfactory method of transacting business now. Such is the fluctuation in the price of gold, the standard of the circulating medium, that the credit system must of necessity be entirely incompatible with it; to say nothing of the very unsettled condition of political affairs, and the general loss of confidence, engendered thereby through every circle of trade, through every walk of life.

Cash, therefore, is the word; or what is considered conivalent, a short credit with city screptance. On these terms goods are purchased, and on these they must be sold; and however inconvenient the system may be at the cutset, in the end it will be found that it works best to all parties, afinitely to the advantage of the jobber, scarcely less so to the country merchant, and so likewise to the retail purchaser and final consumer. It will be easy, by following this plan, at all times for each party to take the measure of his standing. a man of much note, except as one of the most | The item of "bad" and "doubtful debts" will no ledger; and the consumer will not be under the diagreeable necessity of meditating how to pay for what has already been consumed. The old indiscriminate credit system was impolitic, unfair, and niquitous,-euch as ultimately must prove ruinous to any country. But the moment the merchant enters into any negotiations of this character with an unmercantile party, never mind what his occupation or profession, what his position in society, or what his character for honesty or integrity, he canfact is tuc well known to need any proof in further elucidation. Commercial honesty is often sneered at by the moralist; the poet long ago said: "Honor sinks where commerce long prevails." We shall not undertake to say there is no truth in this. loss to indicate.

Let the merchants then from Florida, Georgia Alabama, Mississippi, South and North Carolina come to Charleston, as was their wont in other days. They will find a good market hore for any produce they may wish to bring to market; and they will as heretofore, find a large and excellently ssorted stock of goods and merchandise of every description, at as reasonable rates as they can obtain in New York, Philadelphia, Boston or Baltiessor Joseph Le Conte, of the University of more. ## PHILANTHROPY.

Human nature is very curious. While it is true that in the main it is always and everywhere the same, yet it undergoes various changes from time to time, the causes of which are still a mystery to the mental physiologist. Virtues and vices partake of the changes of fashion; and although the "rustic moralist" may, in his simplicity, think these standards have long been settled, he would soon find, on opening a newspaper or going to Congress, that what was once thought a virtue, has now become all but disreputable and what was formerly held very proper and highly respectable, is now a "covenant with sin;" an institution recognized by Scripture, and, in days not long past, legalized in every civilized and Christian country, is now only known as the sum of all villany.

Philanthropy is a virtue entirely of modern in vention. It is not denied that there were good people in other days also. ABRAHAM, MOSES, DA-VID, SOCRATES, ANTONINUS, HAROUN-AL-RASCHID. grain, flour and provisions is now, and has for ALFRED, St. Louis, Barbarossa, the first James of some time, been such in Atlants; as that, while it England, George Washington, and others: they may be satisfactory to the dealer, it is really were all very well; but they were good only acsarming to the thoughtful citizen. has prepared a report, of which it is said:

A picture more heart rending, facts more hideous, could not be given. The Commissioner estimates the deaths in Orissa alone at 500,000 to 600,000, and in some places be admits that three-fourths of the population have been carried off. Orissa had five millions. Add the mortality of Midnapore, which was as severely visited; of Ganjam and Chota Nagpore, which were terribly yet more midly, dealt with; Calcutta, whose hospitals still te'l so sad a tale; and of the other districts, where the sequelae at least of starvation, carried off many, and remember that the deaths are still going on at the rate of a hundred a day, and you will agree with the rough estimate generally accepted here that the number of viting with some content of the content of the country and remember that the deaths are still going on at the rate of a hundred a day, and you will agree with the rough estimate generally accepted here that the number of viting will be a support of the country and the going on at the rate of a hundred a day, and you will agree with the rough estimate generally accepted here that the number of victims will not be under a million. In 1838-9, when as little was done for relief as in 1866, the mortality in the Jumna Doab was 800,000. But the tale of victims in this Orissa visitation mounts higher than even that, as high as the greatest of all recorded famines in India—that of 1779.

England, that shed so many tears and expended so much philanthropic cant over the fat, sleek and frolicksome slaves of the South, while they were slaves, owned this starving million of people as completely as the Southern people ever owned their slaves, and was as completely responsible for their well-being. But their starvation scarcely cost even Exeter Hall a sigh. What a curious thing is that which is called philanthropy!
